FOREWORD

This exhibition of American Handicrafts circulated under the auspices of the American Federation of Arts, offers unmistakable evidence that, in the twenty-five years since the "first exhibition of the Arts and Crafts" held in Boston in 1897, there has been very encouraging progress both in craftsmanship and design. During this period the opportunity for the ready sale of good handicraft has been demonstrated and this work has undoubtedly played a part in raising the standard of similar work manufactured commercially. The Committee believes that this exhibition affords a creditable representation of the present stage of our craftsmen in designing and executing objects which are both useful and beautiful. No claim is made that it comprises all the good work now being done, for the time allowed for its preparation and collection was rather short. We hope that the work shown will introduce American handicrafts to a wider public and serve as an inspiration and encouragement for many others to enter this field. In the further development of handicraft, it is the abuse and not the use of the machine which is to be condemned, and it is the importance of good design which cannot be too strongly insisted on.

Grateful acknowledgment is made of the cooperation of the Smithsonian Institution, the National Museum, and the National Gallery of Art in assembling this exhibition and giving it first showing; and most particularly of the active and invaluable expert assistance of Mr. William H. Holmes, Director of the National Gallery of Art, and his staff.

H. P. MACOMBER, Chairman,
Committee on Handicrafts A. F. A.
